++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Some showers at first, but increasingly bright, though chilly.

Today:
Early fog and frost in south lifting, then occasional sunshine for many areas, some inland parts dry. Showers in coastal districts continuing, perhaps heavy in a few places, with odd ones developing inland by afternoon. Chilly, turning breezier in northeast.

Tonight:
Showers becoming more restricted to coastal areas in southern UK, still occasionally heavy. Chilly with clear intervals for many; patchy frost in the north and windy in the east.

Thursday:
Showers in some southwestern and southeastern coastal areas, tending to ease. Many areas dry but chilly with some sunshine. Windy in some eastern coastal areas. Rain in far north later.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Most parts fine on Friday after early frost and fog, but patchy rain in the north. Strong winds and rain crossing many areas on Saturday but brighter again by Sunday.
